BIO

James specializes in civil defense litigation, leveraging a dual background in medicine and law. Prior to practicing law, James spent years working in emergency medicine as a firefighter and paramedic, giving him invaluable, firsthand knowledge when analyzing medical testimony, serious injury claims, and complex liability issues.

A former judicial law clerk for the Oakland County Circuit Court, James combines insider knowledge of courtroom dynamics with rigorous case analysis. He works closely with insurance carriers, self-insured entities, and corporate clients to construct proactive defense strategies aimed at mitigating exposure and securing early, favorable resolutions. He also serves as an adjunct instructor in legal writing and torts, bringing both scholarly precision and practical real-world experience to every defense strategy he builds. Outside the practice of law, James enjoys spending time outdoors with his wife, Nicole, and their three children.
